

U.S. ARMY CORPS OF ENGINEERS, MISSISSIPPI VALLEY DIVISION

SPEAKERS BUREAU

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Mississippi Valley Division is responsible for a multi-faceted and challenging water resources mission for the entire Mississippi River. The division boundaries include portions of 12 states and encompass 370,000 square miles that span the river's corridor from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. The numerous missions performed by division and its six districts include urban and rural flood protection, navigation, environmental protection and restoration, emergency management and recreation.

Corps personnel are proud of the contributions they make toward improving the quality of life along the Mississippi River. And they welcome opportunities to inform the public about the division's various activities or simply talk about their particular field of expertise through our Speakers Bureau program.

The Speakers Bureau is a multi-disciplinary team of professionals who will share expertise and knowledge on a number of diverse topics. Managed by the MVD Public Affairs Office, this educational and free service is available to organizations, clubs, educational institutions and special interest groups.
